

Big Bro babe is back in fashion

by MICHAEL BOOKER

DRESS TO THRILL: Sexy Aisleyne models one of her new range of clothes

FORMER Big Brother star Aisleyne Horgan-Wallace has designs on becoming the next Vivienne Westwood.

The raunchy glamour babe grabbed the chance to design her own fashion collection late last year.

And the range - Unique Aisleyne - is already taking the fashion world by storm.

So much so she's been asked to design another collection for the next London Fashion Week in September.

A source said: "There's a real buzz around the collection. She's going to be big in British fashion."

That's no surprise because fashion is in Aisleyne's blood. Her mother Sophia Horgan was a designer and owned a small clothing label.

Spotted

But Londoner Aisleyne, 29, looks certain to hit the heights her mum never quite reached.

Her work is already a firm favourite of singer Lisa Maffia and model Orlaith McAllister who have both been spotted wearing Aisleyne's creations.

Since then she's had a string of big-name celebs demanding the chance to wear her future creations.

Aisleyne, who has joined forces with leading high-end fashion company Unique Collections Ltd, said: "Fashion is a powerful tool, especially for women. The right look, fabric, colour or even shoes can boost your confidence, lift your mood, your image and attitude. I'm just glad women like my work!"

Stockists of her designs include: Asos.com, Browns (Glasgow), Drome (Richmond, North Yorks), Hoopers Dept Stores, Fenwicks (Brent Cross, London) and Richmond Classics (Bournemouth).